WHAT CAUSES A MIGRAINE ATTACK?^{1,4,5}

While research into the exact mechanism that causes migraine is ongoing, a protein called calcitonin gene-related peptide, or CGRP is known to play a role.

During a migraine attack, CGRP levels increase and bind to CGRP receptors resulting in pain and inflammation.

HOW DOES AQUIPTA WORK WITHIN YOUR BODY?^{1,4-6}

AQUIPTA (ATOGEPAANT) IS DESIGNED TO BLOCK CGRP.

AQUIPTA was specifically designed to prevent migraine attacks by directly targeting the CGRP receptor and blocking CGRP from binding to stop migraine-related pain and inflammation.
